Little Gerardo losing fight with cancer

Dad says he'll turn to God to try to save his 6-year old son

By Natalie Shore

Everything fell into place for Gerardo Padilla except fate.

Only weeks after the 6-yearold Ontario boy won the heart of the U.S. government to qualify for a life-saving cancer treatment, Gerardo's greatest enemy — leukemia — struck back.

His two-month remission ended four weeks ago when medical tests revealed Gerardo's cancer was spreading. Doctors have given him only six months to live, said the boy's father, Gerardo Padilla Sr

"They told us there is no way of controlling it now," Padilla said.

The change in Gerardo's condition prevents him from seeking a bone marrow transplant doctors had hoped would save his life. The news comes in the wake of a seemingly impossible victory the boy, a Mexican national, won in December.

The Immigration and Naturlization Service granted his family temporary legal status so Gerardo could apply for Medi-Cal to pay for the costly procedure. Before federal officials issued the rare emergency visa, the family, whose application for permanent residency was moving slowly through normal immigration channels, had no other way of paying for the $400,000 treatment.

Because Gerardo could only undergo the transplant while his leukemia was in remission, Gerardo's teacher, principal and classmates at Linda Vista School had helped doctors lobby federal officials to expedite the process.

Given the prognosis, the family has discontinued Gerardo's chemotherapy. The treatment is painful and is not

Monte Vista extension gets agencies' support

By William Diepenbrock

Claremont, Upland, San Bernardino County and the San Bernardino County Association of Governments have promised to help Montclair extend Monte Vista Avenue to Foothill Boulevard.

A $6.5 million project, the finished road would connect the San Bernardino (10) Freeway to the planned Foothill Freeway and generate development along the route.

So far, SANBAG has offered to reimburse $450,000 spent on preliminary design and engineering plans before next January, when the coalition hopes to advertise for a contractor.

"A year from today I want to have all this done," said Montclair City Administrator Michael Milhiser, who acted as host for an annual meeting of the agencies last week.

Montclair has pursued the extension for six years, Milhiser said recently.

A longer Monte Vista Avenue will relieve stressed traffic routes in Montclair and adjacent cities, attract more customers to Montclair Plaza and make now-undeveloped property profitable, he said.

"That makes Monte Vista Avenue a very strong economic corridor once the project is completed," said Paul Cleaveland, a consulting engineer who helped prepare a report on the project released Jan. 25.

About $2.1 million of the project's cost is attributed to the need for a railroad grade separation in Montclair, which the city will attempt to pay on its own, Milhiser said.

About $670,000 will come from Measure I transportation money that Montclair will be alloted by SANBAG, with the rest to come from developers and other sources, he said.

The cities and county are looking to SANBAG for the remaining $3.95 million — a figure that excludes the planning costs, he said.

SANBAG Executive Deputy Director Michael Blair said the group is not sure where the money will come from, but funds may be borrowed from an unspecified regional project.

A planned reorganization of funds alloted for arterial streets — now assigned to cities on a per capita basis — also could bring the project some money, Blair said.

At the same time, other regional projects like the upgrading of the Corona (71) Expressway to a freeway could compete for available cash, he added

It is a problem Blair said he hopes to solve by next year.

The project is complicated by the Montclair grade crossing, a second grade crossing at the Southern Pacific line, a bridge over the San Antonio Channel and buttressing needed in areas where the street borders gravel pits.

Planners also must decide whether the Monte Vista extension will be a six-lane road, a four-lane road or one with an alternative format, Cleaveland said.

The improvement will run from Arrow Route to Foothill Boulevard, where the current road is called Padua Avenue by Upland and Claremont.

Quarry tax could put users between rock, hard place

By J. Rezendes-Herrick

Rock quarry operators say its a question of cutting profits close to the bone. Upland officials reply that municipal budgets face the same crunch.

In between are homeowners who probably will end up paying more for decorative rock, masonary and other products targeted for a tax on the June ballot.

"Any tax would be a profound increase in our costs and it would be passed on to the consumer," said Ron Intravaia, operations manager for Intravaia Rock and Sand on Mountain Avemue.

City Council members last week unanimously endorsed placing a measure on the June 5 ballot to tax operators up to 14 cents per ton on material they pull from the ground.

But they left the door open to resolve differences that have surfaced between the city and gravel processors since the tax first was proposed last year. "We are looking at how to maintain the quality of life," said City Manager Ray Silver. "At the same time, state and federal government is doing less and less. We have to come up with a system to do the things they used to do."

"It's difficult for us to absorb any kind of increase in the operating costs," said Pete
Pouwels with Holiday Rock
Co. on Foothill Boulevard.
"Ultimately, the cost is going to be passed on to consumers, which includes residents of Upland."

Silver said the city began considering the tax in April. He pointed to hidden costs that quarry operations have on the city. Gravel trucks drop debris on the streets and cause increased wear on the roads. And quarry operations not only close out the land for other uses but depress values on the property surrounding them, he said.

Pouwels stressed that his and other firms routinely send out their own cleanup crews to collect debris from trucks. And he recognized the burden heavily-laden trucks place on city thoroughfares.

With a 14-cent per ton tax, the city would collect about $400,000 annually from four processors with operations at least partly inside city boundaries.

But Pouwels called the amount "exhorbitant" and called it out of line with other Southern California cities that have imposed the levy. Currently, Azusa charges 13 cents per ton and Irwindale assesses 9 cents per ton.

"We bid our jobs out sometimes a year in advance, we make a commitment on materials prices," he said. "Our proposal is that we have some sort of break-in rate."

He presented a 9 cent figure to city officials last week and argued for postponing the effective date of the tax.

The city compromised on the original proposal by making the 14 cents a cap instead of the set sum for the tax that will be put before voters

Checks rarely in mail for family, thanks to system

By David Wert

To San Bernardino County, Mollie Thomas and her two children are an account number.

The people who handle the Montclair resident's child support checks probably don't know that a car wreck put her out of work for almost all of 1989, or that she had to move in with her 77-year-old father last year to make ends meet. And they probably do not know she could not afford to buy a Christmas tree or any presents until Dec. 21.

Mollie said the checks are sometimes five months late, and never are they less than two weeks tardy. She said it is not her ex-husband's fault because he sends money to the county at the end of every month. He has to, because his employer's payroll department does it for him, she said.

"The children depend on that money. Their father sends the money for the children. ... The kids are being victimized and that's not right," she said.

When the county is not getting phone calls from Mollie, it gets them from her exhusband, Brad Thomas of Upland.

"I've called. I understand they have stacks of paperwork but that money is for my children. I'd like to see something done," Brad said.

What the workers in the county's Probation Department do know is that the Thomas family is one of more than 45,000 whose child support checks go through the District Attorney's Child Support program — an understaffed program that relies on an outdated computer designed to handle only half its current workload, according to officials.

Since the problem was brought to the Board of Supervisors last week, the county has added four people to the Probation Department's staff of six, county Administrative Officer Harry Mays said Monday. Three more will join their ranks in the weeks to come. Ву

But Claude Potts, director of administrative services for the Probation Department, said he needs at least 14 new people to handle the backlog. He said that before last week, not one employee had been added to his department in five years. And during the same time, the department's caseload has more than doubled.

In the meantime, Mollie and her two children — Katie Marie, 7, and Benjamin, 6 — have to get by on what the county can manage to send them.

Mollie said Brad's employer sends $575 to the county on the last day of every month. At the time of their divorce two years ago, she said a representative from the District Attorney's Office promised her she would receive the money within six days.

But that's never been the case.

From January to August, checks are often two, three, four, even five months behind, she said. Once September rolls around, however, the checks are only two to three weeks late, she said.

When her queries to the county are not met with ignorance, they are met with hostility, she said.

"I've been told they can't locate my check. They have told me to apply for welfare and they have told me to go get a job. It's embarrassing," she said. "They have told me, 'Why Mrs. Thomas, we sent you a check just last month,' like I was lucky to get it."

"I've been fortunate. My family has picked up the loose ends," Mollie added, saying money and clothes sometimes come her way when the county checks don't.

Instead, Padilla will take Gerardo back to Mexico for treatment at a natural health clinic in Jalisco where doctors will try to cure the boy through diet, exercise and traditional medicine, he said.

"This is the final battle," Padilla said. "Since science has not worked, we are turning to God."

Padilla, an architect, said he does not know how he will pay for the $7,000 treatment.

Nevertheless, he will find a way. Padilla said.

Young soldier, 20, earned medal in Panama

In Chino Hills family kept vigil by television set

By David Wert

David Baca is 20 years old. And he is a war veteran.

'I can't quite picture that," the soft-spoken Chino Hills resident said as he studied the Combat Infantry Badge he was awarded after returning from Panama in January.

Pfc. Baca, a member of the Army's elite 82nd Airborne Infantry Division stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C., said he knew something was brewing on Dec. 10 when his unit was diverted from snowy Alaska to the steaming jungles of Central

After 10 days of jungle training, Baca found himself in the dark of night on an attack boat heading through the Panama Canal toward a prison in which then-dictator Manuel Noriega was holding those who had tried to oust him only a few weeks earlier.

Baca's job was to bombard the prison's guard houses with rifle-propelled grenades while his comrades freed the inmates and arrested members of Noriega's Panamanian Defense

'When we were on our way on the boats I was scared and very nervous," Baca said. When the accompanying assault helicopters opened fire, "that's when I felt the blood really rushing through my veins and the pores were starting to open.

Once we started running off the boats, that's when I really didn't feel any fear any more. I was just doing my job like I was supposed to. I didn't have to

Meanwhile, back home, Baca's parents, David and Marilyn, kept a vigil near the television set, hanging on every news report that came in.

The worst part was not knowing exactly where he was,' said Baca's father. The young soldier did not have a chance to phone his family before going to Panama, and he did not get a chance to call before getting on the attack boat.

'There was a number on the TV we could call to find out more," said Baca's mother. "But all they would say was whether he was dead or wounded, and we didn't want to make the call," his father added.

Baca's friend, Brad Bretoi, joined the vigil.

"I knew the consequences — that he could die," Bretoi said. "But I was optimistic."

Back in the jungle, Baca said it took well into the morning to secure the prison. A friend of

It's 2:45 p.m. and the line begins at the Rancho Cucamonga branch library on Base Line Road.

Students from area high and elementary schools file in, scrambling for the reference materials they need for their history reports.

But the number of books is limited because of space, and parents, students, city officials and library supporters say it's time to make room for more books, computers, copiers and quiet places to read.

'We need something double this size," said Cheryl Bryant, a mother of three who was helping her daughter with a school report. "It would be fantastic if they built a bigger

Upland trustees' benefits now to include stipend

Trustees of the Upland Unified School District now will be paid for their time.

Members of the district's governing board unanimously voted Jan. 23 to pay themselves $400 a month — the maximum compensation allowed by law — for serving on the school board. Until now, Upland trustees' only benefits was the option to participate in the district's health care plan.

The board voted for compensation because the job has become much bigger and more time-consuming, President Joseph Lenz said.

The Upland Unified School District serves more than 10,800 students. Upland included, 12 of the region's 15 school boards compensate themselves for board service.

Fourteen school districts offer trustees the same health care package available to district employees. The Mt. Baldy Joint School District is the region's only district where trustees receive no benefits.

NEW EXIT — Construction crews got started Jan. 23 paving the new San Bernardino (10) Freeway off-ramp at Monte Vista Avenue.

The construction was expected to be complete late that day. Work also is being done at the eastbound Central Avenue off-ramp.

Recycling push to come soon for Inland Valley cities

By Lee Peterson

Inland Valley residents and businesses can expect to be urged, forced and cajoled to participate in recycling as local cities are in turn forced to comply with strict statewide goals for diverting waste from landfills.

Local governments must design "not promises, but plans," when it comes to meeting the deadlines, state waste management officials said Jan. 22.

Emergency regulations to be enacted this month are to put into effect the state law approved by the Legislature and governor last year mandating enormous improvement in recycling levels.

"In accomplishing what are the dramatic and ambitious goals in this law it's going to completely change the solid waste infrastructure And it's going to be expensive," said George Larson, executive officer of the California Integrated Waste Management Board.

The expense, borne by taxpayers, will be caused by the programs needed to divert 25 percent of a community's garbage away from landfills by the year 1995. By the year 2000, cities and counties must keep 50 percent of their garbage out of the dump.

"I think they are rightfully a little curious about how they are going to meet these goals," said Chris Peck, waste management board spokesman.

The state board, which is being taken apart and put back together again by the same recycling law that set the goals, was supposed to have the emergency regulations enacted by Jan. 1 but could not meet that deadline.

The first deadline the board, in turn, will ask cities to meet is a July 1, 1991, deadline for the completion of a detailed waste reduction and recycling plan.

Each plan involves a great deal of painstaking accounting as the cities will have to figure out how much of what their residents and business have been tossing out.

One sanitation official said Jan. 22 that it was unlikely that most communities have kept the kind of records that this law, in effect, retroactively requires them to have.

In addition, Larson himself said it is costly and probably inefficient to expect the state's more than 500 city and county governments to each conduct their own studies but that is what the state law, AB 939, requires.

"We cannot do other than what the law has allowed," Larson said.

Cities that already have such programs as curbside recycling in place will be credited for what those efforts are keeping out of the local dump, Larson said.

library as part of a planned 100acre central park. The county library is 11,000 square feet.

The city is making an application to the state to help pay the cost of the building and it is also determining who will run it and how it'll raise money to keep it running.

All of the options, however, center on money and a preliminary city report indicates that based soley on economics it would be cheaper to continue as a county library.

"Currently the county is the cheapest way to go," said Deputy City Manager Linda Daniels. "But we are at the beginning stages and nothing is definite."

Daniels said more study will continue as the June deadline to apply for construction funds nears and that all the options will be looked at including county vs. a city operation.

City-staff members are working on a report that looks at the economic feasibility of all the options.

The state library grant would pay for 65 percent of the $10 million cost to build the library, Daniels said. She also said the state grant does not depend on who is going to run the library.

Daniels said $75 million is available to county and city governments that plan to build libraries under the Library Bond and Construction Act of 1988.

The library is expected to be built as the first phase of Central Park. The entire park is expected to be completed in five years.

A June 1989 study revealed that residents felt more library space was needed in the city. In November the city included a library in the conceptual master plan for the 100-acre park planned for Base Line Road between Milliken and Haven avenues.

According to the preliminary report, a county-run library system in Rancho Cucamonga would cost $1.9 million a year to operate. About $400,000 would come from a county library tax.

A city-run library would cost $4 million a year to operate based on state figures of libraries serving communities similar in size to Rancho Cucamonga.

Other alternatives include a city library that contracts with an outside agency to operate it. In Rancho Cucamonga's case, the outside contractor would be the county. The city would own the building.

The city also could form a special library district that would operate with the county library tax money and additional money raised through either user fees or a special tax.

Additional funding could either come from user fees, assessment districts or a special library tax, Daniels said.

Her strategy was guaranteed to stop students dead in their tracks. Hill said. But she never had to use it because her first plan always worked.

"Every time I broke up a fight, I'd say, 'You don't want to hit an old lady,' " Hill said.

After 28 years in teaching and more than a decade of leading the Associated Chaffey Teachers, Hill, 62, will retire from the Chaffey Joint Union High School District in June. Joyce Brooks, chairwoman of the English department at Montclair High School, is a leading contender to take over the association's presidency, Hill said.

A native of Oklahoma, Hill went back to school in the late 1950s and became a teacher to support her three children after her divorce.

"I'm one of those women who was a housewife for 17 vears. I felt I didn't even scrub floors well, so I decided I best get an education," she said.

The promise of more money drew Hill and her family to California in 1966. After four years of teaching in Oklahoma, her annual income there was only $3,900, she said.

'I doubled my salary in my first year here," she said.

Hill first taught remedial classes for up to 40 students in the Central School District. When new state laws reclassified the programs as special education, her classes

Consultant proposals for Upland's land use plan due

By J. Rezendes-Herrick

Consultant proposals are due this week as part of Upland's three-year, $400,000 effort to revise the city's land use plan.

"With larger projects like this, our intent is to break it into work programs and spread the costs over a longer time," said Planning Director Jeff Bloom. "We're waiting to see what the consultants' proposals come in

Since Padua Avenue connects to the proposed Foothill (30) Freeway, Monte Vista Avenue will provide the only complete thoroughfare from the proposed freeway to the San Bernardino (10) Freeway, Cleaveland said

The improvement to Monte Vista should ease traffic congestion on Indian Hill Boulevard and San Antonio, Mountain, Benson and Central avenues, Milhiser said.

The next step is for agency representatives to obtain approvals from their respective governing bodies in the form of an allocation of funds for the preliminary work.

While city planners will do considerable work on the plan, consultants need to do some of the more detailed, timeconsuming research. Consultant proposals were to be presented to City Hall by 5 p.m. Wednesday

The general plan is the city's blueprint for housing, traffic circulation, environmental quality and economic development. State law requires cities to periodically update the plans but Upland received added incentive from residents in the city's oldest residential neighborhood.

People living in the area south of Foothill Boulevard and east of Euclid Avenue complained of apartments and duplexes invading their neighborhoods. The Red Cross always there in time of disaster

By Lisa Van Proyen

In time of disasters there's usually little or no time to think.

In a fire, one is likely to see a family running out of the house in the middle of the night without shoes or warm clothing.

"In the fires I have gone to it's almost like a syndrome. People are in shock and scared. They need comfort and they need to know they're going to be taken care of,' said Liz Dewar, co-chairman of the West End Disaster Action Team (DAT).

DAT is an American Red Cross Disaster Relief Program, and a neighbor to those in need of help.

Even something as small as putting a doughnut and a cup of coffee in someone's hand who has just had a house burn down is the best way of saying, "Somebody will help."

The program assists by providing fixed or mobile feeding units, clothing, shelter, cleaning supplies, first aid or other medical care, bedding and furniture, transportation and some minor

While some soldiers were allowed to bring back knives and other keepsakes, Baca's commanding officer did not allow his charges to hold on to mementos, he said.

"I had a Panamanian flag, but I had to leave it behind.

When the prison fell, the war was pretty much over for Baca. The rest of his time was spent pulling guard duty or patrolling the streets of Gamboa, halfway between Panama City and Colon, searching for remnants of Noriega's army.

He said the people of Gamboa were mostly poor fishermen and farmers. "They were happy to see us. They told us where the Dignity Battalions were keeping their ammo," he said, referring to Noriega's vigilante force. 'They brought us Cokes and coffee, even bread.'

Things were tense for U.S. soldiers until Noriega turned himself in at the Vatican embassy in Panama City. In Gamboa, Baca's fellow troops almost opened fire on an approaching fire truck because they had heard a shot ring out. As it turned out, one of the soldiers had dropped his rifle and had tried to pick it up by the triager.

When the deposed dictator finally turned himself in "it was Christmas Eve and we said this was the best Christmas present anyone could have," Baca said.

"He had been spreading rumors that he was getting reinforcements and building up his army in the mountains," Baca said.

'We gave Noriega many chances to leave the country. But he wouldn't go. He was violating the Panama Canal treaty and we had to go in there and take him out.

Baca didn't get to call his parents until after Christmas.

His decision to enlist a year and a half ago surprised his father. His decision to join an airborne division was a shock

"The closest he had been to a parachute was Knott's Berry Farm," said the soldier's father.

"I wanted to experience military life. I liked what they had to offer," Baca said.

Baca flew back to North Carolina Jan. 24. Both he and his parents agreed it was much more difficult than usual to say

Said Baca's father: "We hate to see him go. We were more appreciative that he came back this time than ever before.

Said Baca: "I can't say that I wanted to go to war. But I'm proud to wear my Combat

Infantry Badge.'

Draft revisions would be taken to the Planning Commission in May and the City Council in June. The schedule provides for a public workshop late this year and public hearings before the commission and council prior to approving the final general plan changes.

Following the general plan's adoption, the city must review its zoning and subdivision regulations to ensure they agree with the new planning standards. That process, which includes public hearings, could take up to an additional year.

More than 15 consulting firms were contacted.

to know how to do it, hire me, and they did," she said.

During Hill's tenure as union president, she was a leading critic of the unification of Upland schools in 1986. She also was at the center of a controversial union dues election, which caused a group of teachers to break away and form their own

In hindsight, the controversy was healthy because those individuals will bring needed change to the Associated Chaffey Teachers, Hill said. "They've joined us and they're going to change us from within," she said

Collective bargaining and a willingness among students and teachers to share their problems as well as their triumphs are trends that have improved education, Hill said. But despite salary gains, the teaching profession still suffers from a lack of respect, she said.

That respect won't come until teacher salaries are on par with other professions that require as much education, Hill said. "Like it or not, money is a criterion for success.'
